Note: The negotiated learning hours will vary for each individual learner in terms of directed and/or self-directed learning hours - refer negotiated learning outline in section 4.3*

Aims

This course will introduce the participant to the concept of work-based learning and enable the participant to construct and negotiate a justified Learning Agreement that outlines a work-based learning (WBL) inquiry and determine an appropriate practitioner-based inquiry methodology for the proposed inquiry.

Learning Outcomes

At the successful completion of this course, students will be able to:

1. Negotiate the development of a learning agreement and the terms of the WBL inquiry with the employer/sponsor/professional body and institution;
2. Develop and explore practitioner skills in inquiry methodologies, to enable and inform the design and purpose of the focus inquiry, taking account of the ethical implications that could arise during the project;
3. Construct a well justified and methodologically sound WBL project, inquiry and/or other work-based activity, designed to improve or inform areas of the participants own or other's work/practice;

Indicative Content

The specific content, approach and assessment design for this course are negotiated in order to meet the requirements of the inquiry/project, learner context, individual professional development and/or organisational development needs in preparation for the submission to the WBL Learning Agreement Approval Panel

Content may include:

- work-based project/ inquiry/ activity design processes,
- project management and problem solving strategies
- reflection and reflexivity skills.
